

The Journal of Sri Krishna Research & Educational Consortium

International Journal of Marketing and Management
Research

Internationally Indexed & Listed Referred e-Journal

ETHICS & ONLINE FRAUDS IN MARKET OF EDUCATION

Dr. D. Srinivasa Moorthy
Reader in commerce
Government Degree College, NAIDUPETA
Nellore District

Dr. C.S. Sukumar Reddy
Reader in commerce
S.V.A. Government degree college,
Chittoor District
Email : researchsuku@gmail.com

Once upon a time education was given much importance by the society. Some say that the so called education now has become slave to a group of society. "Education is for the students and students for education". So was the education system in the last days of 2000 millennium. Learners and education were interdependent each other. It was the system wandering the learners seeking for education. Some people are in their illusion that they have been controlling education. But, education never be controlled by anyone. So education which could not be controlled by any is called education. Bureaucrats at present do business with education. They are in the process of pollution of education. Many intellectuals say that the education system is on the verge of uneducated culture. If it is true, everyone has to responsible for these sins towards education. Mahathma Gandhi, the father of nation identified seven sins in his autobiography such as politics without principles, science without humanity, commerce without morality, knowledge without character, wealth without work, worship without sacrifice and pleasure without conscience. Truly says education is also in the cluster of false trading. Days have come that the sin commerce without morality in. The accountability is on the shoulders of intellectuals now. They should take/inculcate education among the present generation. Some of the derelictions can be presented here.

- Dereliction in learning by the teachers. It is highly deplorable because the teachers are called as themselves that they must be in ever learning
- Dereliction regarding prepare the students for examinations.
- There is no perfection in framing absolute and right syllabus to the right students.

There must be given much importance to the education which gives righteous way to the present society. It is the major requisite to the society at present. Hence, a teacher should love his students and the subject of him in educating the students. If a teacher goes to a class simply because it is his duty to do as he is paid, for that, then we can not expect any kind of quality of teaching from him. A teacher should have infinite patience the students may do something wrong out of their ignorance, yet, the should impart his knowledge to them and educate them in continuation to be their benefactor. Otherwise the society has to face consequences of perdition.

Deceiving by one another is called fraud. Fraud that is committed using the internet is “online fraud.” Online fraud can involve financial fraud and identity theft. Online fraud comes in many forms.

- It ranges from viruses that attack computers with the goal of retrieving personal information, to email schemes that lure victims into wiring money to fraudulent sources,
- E - mails that purport to be from official entities such as banks or the Internal Revenue Service that solicit personal information from victims to be used to commit identity theft, to fraud on online auction sites where perpetrators sell fictional goods. The methods used by perpetrators of online fraud are constantly evolving.
- There are two types of online frauds which are Financial fraud and identity theft. Identity theft happens when a person’s identity is used to commit, aid, or abet any unlawful activity. Sometimes financial fraud may lead to identity theft. Suppose, an offender may send an email to a victim, pretending to be from a bank and ask for the victim’s bank account information. If the victim releases that information and the offender drains the victim’s bank account, then a financial fraud is committed. The offender may then also use the victim’s personal information to create additional bank accounts through which money is laundered, or to open additional credit cards. This second type is identity theft. It is important to recognize that the crimes of financial fraud and identity theft are distinct crimes, but that at times they may be interrelated.

Educational online frauds : acquiring fake Degrees from the educational mills such as supplying degrees which we need for jobs and other purposes. Most employers and educational institutions consider it lying if you claim academic credentials that you didn't earn through actual course work. If you use a so-called “degree” from a such mill to apply for a job or promotion, you risk not getting hired, getting fired, possible prosecution and mentally persecuted. Phone call fraud : at present, the most commonly used by all is phone contacts. The scammers may call through phone or notify that our computer has a virus. For example You may receive a call from a polite gentleman who informs you there is a virus on your computer. If you do truly have a virus, your computer may be running slowly, with a good news, he tells you that he is from reputed company services he can help you out. He asks for remote access to your computer so that he can show you the corrupted files. You are convinced those files don’t look normal and agree to let him “fix” or “rectify” the problem. He asks for your credit card number, bank account or a prepaid debit card as payment Once the supported agent gains access, they will be able to view your files and commit for online frauds.

Need of the hour : to detect the frauds in education and necessary care should be taken for the effulgent of education. The problem arises when students fall prey to some gimmicks and realize their mistake when they don’t get a degree. Consequently, it is necessary to conduct a background check of the institution that one wants to enroll himself in and parents also have to take necessary steps to gather the information about the institution in which their children want to be enrolled. Though it is difficult to unearth the authenticity of big institutes, since most of them are owned by our businessmen and politicians, one has to do so because it’s a matter of their child’s career. So here are some basic parameters that one should consider before shelling out those big bucks for any fraud institute:

- Check for university affiliation.
- Confirm with the university about the institute.
- University Grant Commission (UGC) has all the information about the status of universities across the country.
- If you’re applying for a distance learning course, the Distance Education Council is the body that regulates all the open universities and distance learning courses.

All we know about the fraudulent practices of institutes such as the famed The name paints a picture of giving intellectual speeches on success, well, sadly the institution guarantees everything but success. In addition to that the students do not get a degree after completing a course. It is the power of money, advertising this institution gets that is responsible for ruining the careers of thousands of young professionals. Now we can understand why it's so hard to trust an institute? We enroll our children in an institute with the hope of a better future for them, but a wrong institute should be detrimental. Thus, it is important to stay informed and vigilant when it comes to choosing one's future.

However it is the context to express that everyone be in the mind that one should not be cheated and not to acted as deceived himself in the name of education. Abdul kalam says "If you pollute the education then you have to salute to all and if you salute your education you need not to salute others you will be famed at yourself". Moral rectitude is necessary in all fields. Knowing this is known as education.